TWO MIGRATION TYPES TO SUIT YOUR NEEDS

Synchronized Migration

If you aren't ready to fully make the move to a new ECM, or your business does not allow for document downtime, you will need a synchronized migration. This method of migrating documents allows you to move documents while allowing work to continue in the old repository by synchronizing content changes across repositories at the set interval of your choice.

Blackout Migration

If you are ready to make the leap all at once, choose a blackout migration. This method of migrating data allows you to move all documents to the repository of choice at one time while marking, deleting, or linking them from your old repository. This migration does require some planned downtime until all documents have moved to your new repository; however, it is the fastest way to make the jump to a new ECM.

CONNECT TO ALL YOUR REPOSITORIES

Vortex Content Migration has native connectors into the following repositories. This allows our solution to adapt easily to your unique needs so you can use any of the following as either the source or target of your migration.
