

Doxly Now Integrates With iManage

INDIANAPOLIS - March 5, 2019 - Doxly today announced that its transaction workflow management platform is now fully integrated with all versions of iManage, the leading document management system for today's modern legal professional. Doxly's seamless integration with all versions of iManage into its platform enhances attorneys' transactional workflows by enabling legal teams to forgo document storage in the cloud.

Doxly partnered with SeeUnity, the content integration experts with a deep understanding of secure server environments within law firms, to securely connect law firms on-premise iManage and iManage Cloud instance to Doxly for a seamless transfer of documents between Doxly and iManage thereby enabling Doxly to operate as a virtually on-prem system.

"As the industry standard, iManage is an important partner for our document management system integrations," said Haley Altman, CEO of Doxly. "Not only do we focus on continuing to keep the iManage system as the source of truth for our customers, but the Doxly system will identify if documents have been successfully saved back to the iManage system, providing the security and control law firms need to ensure the preservation of their executed agreements."

With the iManage integration, Doxly users can now browse and select their iManage documents without leaving the Doxly application. Users can also push the final record of a deal back to iManage by utilizing their closing books features and save over 80% of administrative time on closing book creation.

"Our technology partnership with iManage enables us to support secure integrations, such as this one with Doxly, to further extend iManage capabilities to innovative firms seeking ways to improve efficiency and stay competitive," said Dan Anderson, CEO, SeeUnity.

The iManage document management system integration is now available to the legal market.
