HighQ and SeeUnity Proudly Announce a Strategic Partnership

DENVER, CO – MAY 18, 2016 – HighQ and SeeUnity proudly announce a strategic partnership. SeeUnity is a leading provider of content synchronization software solutions for on premise and cloud-based applications. As an integration partner for HighQ, SeeUnity will be offering solutions for integrating and synchronizing content between HighQ, other leading ECM and CRM applications.

This strategic partnership sees two leaders in the legal software space join forces to offer bi-directional syncing between HighQ's industry-leading file sharing and team collaboration platform and most major ECM systems, including OpenText eDOCS, Microsoft SharePoint, iManage Work, NetDocuments, and many more. The out-of-the-box integration will enable bi-directional syncing and make it much easier to share, sync, and archive documents between an organization's DM and HighQ seamlessly. The solutions enable administrative driven and/or user-initiated synchronization to give organizations a great amount of flexibility in the way they govern their document synchronization.

Stuart Barr, Chief Strategy Officer at HighQ, explains: "We're delighted to begin this exciting partnership with SeeUnity and to add significant value to our mutual clients. Bi-directional sync for all ECM systems is something that our clients have been asking for and we're delighted to now be able to offer it." This partnership will be beneficial to hundreds of law firms, says Barr. "More than 200 law firms worldwide use HighQ Collaborate as their client extranet, project management and secure file sharing platform. This number is constantly growing as law firms discover it better suits their needs than SharePoint. SeeUnity has helped hundreds of customers make the most of their SharePoint and ECM content by integrating it and synchronizing it with different systems. SeeUnity's solutions will help us extend our software capabilities to current or future customers who are using any of the leading ECM or CRM applications."

"We are seeing an increased demand from our customers for robust cloud-based collaboration solutions such as HighQ. After building our initial integration and synchronization between HighQ, iManage, eDOCS, SharePoint, and other DMs we received great feedback from current customers," said Dan Anderson, CEO and Co-Founder of SeeUnity. "We're excited to officially join forces with HighQ to make our shared customers successful by synchronizing DM content with HighQ sites."

Organizations that are interested in synchronizing their DM content with HighQ can work directly with either SeeUnity or HighQ. HighQ will begin selling SeeUnity's software as an add-on to license fees in May of 2016. Several customer projects are already underway so stay tuned for case studies!

About SeeUnity

SeeUnity's mission is to help businesses make their enterprise content less complicated. Integration of ECM systems has been the main focus of SeeUnity since its inception. At the time, SeeUnity's founders believed this was the largest problem plaguing the industry, and that has held true throughout the years. Today SeeUnity supports over 10 connectors, including: Alfresco, Microsoft SharePoint, OpenText eDOCS, OpenText Content Server, iManage Work, IBM FileNet, and EMC Documentum.
